

Mal Global Accounts

Community Outreach — 15 Messages

Waitlist campaign for community groups & forums
2x per week · ~7.5 weeks

CONFIDENTIAL — Internal use only

All 15 Messages

Post 1 — Introducing Mal

Week 1 · Mon

Hey everyone — wanted to share something I've been keeping an eye on.

There's a new financial institution called Mal that's being built specifically for people who earn in USD but live outside the US. Think freelancers, remote workers, business owners — anyone who deals with the headache of getting paid internationally.

It's a licensed, AI-native financial institution (not a payment processor or a middleman) and it's Shariah-compliant from the ground up. They're offering USD Global Accounts with open-market rates and instant settlement*.

They're opening up across 18 countries — Pakistan, Egypt, UAE, Turkey, Indonesia, Malaysia, and more.

Waitlist is open if you want to check it out, InshAllah:

[\[WAITLIST LINK\]](#)

 Settlement time — confirm exact timing with Product before publishing.*

Post 2 — The USD Problem

Week 1 · Thu

Genuine question — does anyone else find it mad that you can earn in USD but have no way to actually hold USD?

Every dollar you make gets force-converted to local currency the moment it hits your account. You don't pick the rate. You don't pick the timing. And the rate you get is always worse than the one on your screen.

Mal is a new financial institution that gives you a USD Global Account — you hold your dollars, and you convert when YOU decide to. At open-market rates.

Worth a look if this is a pain point for you. Waitlist is live, InshAllah:

[\[WAITLIST LINK\]](#)

Post 3 — Why Mal is Different

Week 2 · Mon

So someone asked me what makes Mal different from Payoneer, Wise, etc. Fair question.

The short answer: Mal is actually a licensed financial institution. Payoneer, Wise, Deel — they're payment processors. They move money. Mal holds it, converts it, and is building lending and credit on top.

It's also Shariah-compliant and AI-native — you can open an account with just your phone and your ID in under a minute. No paperwork. No branch visits.

If you earn globally, it's worth getting on the waitlist early, InshAllah:

[\[WAITLIST LINK\]](#)

Post 4 — Instant Settlement

Week 2 · Thu

The thing that caught my attention about Mal — instant settlement*.

Right now most of us wait 5–7 days to actually see our money after a client pays. Upwork hold, then Payoneer processing, then bank transfer, then conversion. By the time it lands, you've forgotten which project it was for.

Mal is building USD to local currency conversion in seconds*. Not days. Your money, when you need it.

Waitlist is open, InshAllah:

[\[WAITLIST LINK\]](#)

 Settlement time — confirm exact timing with Product before publishing.*

Post 5 — Open-Market Rates

Week 3 · Mon

Quick one for the group — have you ever actually compared the rate you get on a withdrawal vs. the open market rate?

The gap is real. And it adds up fast. Over a year, you're quietly losing hundreds — sometimes thousands — just on the spread.

Mal is a new financial institution offering open-market rates on USD conversions. Plus you choose when to convert — you can hold USD and wait for a better rate if you want.

They're building something genuinely different. Waitlist link if you're interested, InshAllah:

[\[WAITLIST LINK\]](#)

Post 6 — Built on Islamic Values

Week 3 · Thu

Something I don't see talked about enough — how many financial products out there are actually built with our values in mind?

Mal is a new financial institution that's Shariah-compliant from the foundation. Not as a side feature or a separate "Islamic" tier — it's how the whole thing is built. Ethical, transparent, and grounded in the principle that your money is an Amanah.

They're also offering USD Global Accounts, open-market rates, and instant settlement* across 18 countries.

Waitlist is open for early access, InshAllah:

[\[WAITLIST LINK\]](#)

 Settlement time — confirm exact timing with Product before publishing.*

Post 7 — The USD Card

Week 4 · Mon

This one's for anyone paying for SaaS tools, subscriptions, or anything online —

You earn in USD. Your subscriptions are in USD. But right now you're converting to local currency, losing money on the rate, and then paying international fees on top just to subscribe to ChatGPT or AWS. Makes no sense.

Mal's Global Account comes with a USD card. Spend your dollars as dollars. No unnecessary conversions.

Check out the waitlist, InshAllah:

[\[WAITLIST LINK\]](#)

Post 8 — Simplicity

Week 4 · Thu

Honest question — how long did it take you to open your last bank account? Between the paperwork, the branch visit, explaining what freelancing is to a bank manager who's never heard of Upwork...

Mal is AI-native. Your phone, your ID, and you're done. Account open. No branches, no forms, no hour-long explanations about what "remote work" means.

A USD Global Account — free to create, simple by design.

Waitlist link below, InshAllah:

[\[WAITLIST LINK\]](#)

Post 9 — Global Coverage

Week 5 · Mon

For those of you outside Pakistan — Mal isn't just a Pakistan thing.

They're launching across 18 countries: Pakistan, Egypt, UAE, Turkey, Indonesia, Malaysia, Bangladesh, Jordan, KSA, Singapore, and more. Anywhere you earn in USD and need a better way to hold, convert, and spend it.

One USD Global Account. IBAN included. Card included. Local-currency payouts wherever you are.

Waitlist is global too, InshAllah:

[\[WAITLIST LINK\]](#)

Post 10 — Transparency

Week 5 · Thu

One thing I really like about what Mal is building — transparency.

No hidden fees. No surprise annual charges. No spreads you only discover after your money has already been converted. Every fee published. Every rate visible before you confirm.

Sounds basic, right? But name one platform that actually does this consistently. Exactly.

Mal is a licensed financial institution, not a payment processor. Waitlist is open, InshAllah:

[\[WAITLIST LINK\]](#)

Post 11 — Convert on Your Terms

Week 6 · Mon

The local currency dropped again today. If you converted yesterday, you lost money. If you were holding USD, you didn't.

That's the whole point of Mal's Global Account — hold your USD, watch the rate, convert when it works for you. Not when some platform auto-converts at whatever rate suits them.

Your money. Your timing.

Join the waitlist, InshAllah:

[\[WAITLIST LINK\]](#)

Post 12 — The Full Picture

Week 6 · Thu

Been following Mal for a bit now so here's the full picture for anyone asking:

It's a licensed financial institution (not a wallet, not an app — a proper financial institution). AI-native, Shariah-compliant, built for people who earn internationally. USD Global Account with an IBAN and card. Open-market rates. Instant settlement*. 18 countries at launch.

And they're building lending and credit next — designed for people whose income comes from platforms, not payslips.

Waitlist, InshAllah:

[\[WAITLIST LINK\]](#)

 Settlement time — confirm exact timing with Product before publishing.*

Post 13 — Trust / Amanah

Week 7 · Mon

Your money is a trust. An Amanah. And the bare minimum is that whoever holds it should be transparent about what they're doing with it.

No silent deductions. No locked accounts with no explanation. No rates that magically shift between the time you click "convert" and the time it processes.

Mal is being built on that principle. A licensed financial institution where transparency isn't the premium tier — it's the default.

Waitlist is open, InshAllah:

[\[WAITLIST LINK\]](#)

Post 14 — The Bigger Vision

Week 7 · Thu

What I find interesting about Mal is the bigger picture.

Most fintechs solve one thing — payments, or wallets, or cards. Mal is building the full stack: accounts, cards, personal finance tools, and soon lending and credit. All under one roof. All Shariah-compliant. All for people who earn globally.

There isn't really anything else like this out there right now.

If you want early access, the waitlist is live, InshAllah:

[\[WAITLIST LINK\]](#)

Post 15 — Final CTA

Week 8 · Mon

If you earn in USD and you're tired of losing money on every withdrawal — bad rates, hidden fees, days of waiting, accounts that freeze without warning — Mal is worth knowing about.

It's a licensed, Shariah-compliant financial institution with USD Global Accounts, open-market rates, instant settlement*, a USD card, and coverage across 18 countries. Built from scratch for people like us.

The waitlist is open. Be among the first to experience it, InshAllah.

* Settlement time — confirm exact timing with Product before publishing.

Calendar Overview

#	Wk	Day	Theme	Opens With
1	1	Mon	Introducing Mal	Wanted to share something I've been keeping an eye on...
2	1	Thu	The USD Problem	Does anyone else find it mad that you can't hold USD?
3	2	Mon	Why Mal is Different	Someone asked me what makes Mal different...
4	2	Thu	Instant Settlement	The thing that caught my attention...
5	3	Mon	Open-Market Rates	Have you compared your rate vs. open market?
6	3	Thu	Islamic Values	How many products are built with our values in mind?
7	4	Mon	USD Card	You earn in USD. Your subscriptions are in USD...
8	4	Thu	Simplicity	How long did it take to open your last bank account?
9	5	Mon	Global Coverage	Mal isn't just a Pakistan thing...
10	5	Thu	Transparency	One thing I really like about Mal...
11	6	Mon	Convert on Your Terms	The local currency dropped again today...
12	6	Thu	The Full Picture	Here's the full picture for anyone asking...
13	7	Mon	Trust / Amanah	Your money is a trust. An Amanah.
14	7	Thu	The Bigger Vision	What I find interesting is the bigger picture...
15	8	Mon	Final CTA	If you earn in USD and you're tired of losing money...

Notes

1. Replace [WAITLIST LINK] with actual URL.
2. Localize currency references for non-Pakistan markets.
3. For X/Twitter: shorten to opening line + one key point + CTA.
4. Always "Mal" — never "Mal Bank."
5. Suggested posting: Mon 10am, Thu 2pm local time.

GUARDRAILS

Settlement time: "Seconds" or "instant" claims must be confirmed with Product. Default to "in minutes, not days" if unverified.

FX rates: "Open-market rates" is approved. Never promise "zero fees" or "zero spread."

Regulatory: All public comms reviewed by AAS. No licence specifics without clearance.